This Hash run started badly for me, I misread the misdirections and ended up at Falcon Village, a call to the GM told me to retrace my steps and look for the HHH sign on the right hand side, when I reached Bobby's Bar I realised I had gone too far, u turned again and found the HHH sign on my right, straight down the road to the carpark. The GM signaled the circle on his trusted hunting horn and introduced the many virgins to the Hash secrets of checks, splits and merges. Details of barbed wire, dogs etc were given to the herd. At this point Hugs asked the GM about his alleged getting lost the day before while laying the trail, the co-hare, aka Beermaester, said he was not going to mention the five hours he spent on the recce looking for the GM, the GM said there were no tapes on the trail???? So the herd was sent off on the trail only to get confused by the lack of shredded paper. The reason for lack of paper was because "it had been eaten by a nomadic camel", said the Beermaester. The trail led us to the mountains, Yanky Crank was ahead of the herd, so far ahead he missed the mountain and shortcutted back to the carpark, what a Sissy, he was soon joined there by Extra Testicle, who stopped to play football , with some locals, then went back to the carpark, obviously exhausted. The herd climbed the mountain and found the statue of the mermaid, first time I have seen a mermaid with legs. Before getting to the top there was a very small statue of an owl, how many saw that? Over the top and back through some interesting country and back to a road, no paper visible so follow the scent to the beer truck for the On In. On reaching the carpark we had excellent snacks, cold beer and soft drinks. It was dark when the GM called the circle, he called Virgins, returnees, leavers etc into the circle for down downs. As it was also Thai family day the GM brought in the McRobbie's and the Tann's. Next weeks Hash was announced, the circle was closed and the herd moved on to graze at the Coconuts restaurant.
