Pre-Hash

The replacement Hares opted for a territory well known to Scotch Tape, having stepped in at short notice to relieve a sick Hugmanannygoat. And so it was, we gathered on Soi 88 between the 7.1 and 7.2 km markers posts. Today was the first run at the slightly later start time of 5:00 pm. Fellow hashers arrived over the next hour with the last, Slime and Lucky Me arriving as the pack was departing on the trail.

With a cast of 54 the hounds were called to order and Jock Twat advised the pack on the potential dangers that may be faced on this trail. However no mention that we may come across paper from Scotch Tapes last foray into the area some 9 weeks ago. This may have been down to Jock Twat not realizing that when he laid his part of the trail he had ended up on the old trail back to the out trail and home. Something that Scotch Tape advised the GM upon his return he would never do.

The Trail (Green Track)

The pack set off on time, well actually a little early and headed towards down town Hua Hin. Would we go left or right towards the hill? Skirting round a pineapple field we came to the first barbed wire obstacle. Safely past and then over the road heading east towards the previous ST run start. A detour left and then downhill although this was rather short lived. The trail then took a circuitous route to the east and then stated the long haul uphill to a check/false trail at the top. By now the pack had completed 2.4 km. From here it was downhill to a check which had most of the pack confused. The trail was called to the right but after a lengthy distance it was found to be a false trail. Tinks chose to check straight ahead but no paper found. Eventually trail was called left but the paper was well hidden and some distance from the check more than the traditional 100 m. From here it was on to the split, with walkers to the left and runners? What does a runner's sign with an X mean? Nothing in particular, as the trail was called straight ahead by Bush Whacker. The runners trail then skirted the water filled quarry and eventually merged with walkers trail after around 5.6 km into the trail. Shortly thereafter for some reason Bent Banana and Sar with Tinks following behind missed paper off to the right and continued on what looked like fresh paper. A little hick up by the cattle pen and then back on trail to eventually join the outward trail and on home. This was obviously the wrong trail.

Post Trail and Circle

Not sure who ended up coming home the correct way but Tinks together with Bent Banana and Sar definitely did not. Bush Whacker was unclear as to whether or not he had followed the correct trail but after discussion with Scotch Tape all doubt was cleared. Jock Twat produced a print out which supported his trail but not Scotch Tapes. However all had an enjoyable trip out into the surrounding bush land and were now into Miss Snicker's snacks, cold beer and other refreshments. There was some concern as to whether or not Pussy Peddlar was missing but this was short lived as he was clearly back amongst the pack.

With it having been established that there were no missing Hashers the circle was called by Tinks and before the traditional proceedings got under way the Horrors/Ankle-Biters, were called into the circle. After all it was Easter weekend and there was no egg hunt but GM Tinks had a little box which was upstaged by Madman's basket of Easter Bunnies. The Famous Five consisting of High 5, Orange Pippin, Jasmin, Leanna and Muddy Joe were rewarded with Easter Eggs out of Tinks' little box followed with water down downs.

With this ceremony out of the way the traditional circle got under way and Tinks awarded the following Down Downs:

Hares: Jock Twat & Scotch Tape

Hash Snacks: Miss Snickers

April Fool: Butt Out

Virgin Hasher: Tony Batista (Spain)

Birthday Boy: Scotch Tape

Returners: Body Snatcher, Rubber Duck, Cathusalem

Leavers: Stamp Licker, Rotten Dame, Body Snatcher & Old Macdonald

Next Week's Hares: 69 Forever and High 5 (the CAH3 run will be off the Hub Kaphong Road)

On After

Around 35+ Hashers then moved on to Restaurant 94 in central Hua Hin

POST RUN NOTE - Midweek Trail check (Yellow Track)

With the knowledge that the Hares had laid two trails to the finish, Tinks went out later in the week to where the error occurred and found the ST trail to the right. The paper trail was still evident and led to a fenced area resulting in the trail following the fence line to the gate at the road. Safely negotiating the barbed wire fence it was on over the road and on through the bush towards the start point. This sector of the trail was around 950 m. If this correct trail had been followed the overall runners trail would have been 150m shorter.
