Pre-Hash

With rain falling around the Hua Hin area for the past week it looked at times this could be a wet one. Rain bands had been passing through the area but it was dry when Brambles arrived with returners Scotch Tape and Miss Snickers. Tinks arrived shortly thereafter and the weather was still dry. They hounds arrived and by 4:30 the turnout was looking low. Then the first of a heavy rain shower came and everyone bolted back into their cars except Merry Dick and Tinkerballs who dived into Brambles car, having come on their bike. Five minutes later the rain stopped and hashers came out to pay taxes and get ready for today's trail. With more ominous clouds circling about the pack were called to order by GM Tinks for the usually briefing from the days Hares, Jock Twat and Bent Banana. Hugs and Sodomy had difficulty finding the run location but arrived just in time for the briefing. Brambles advised there were three trails, short walk, long walk and runners/rambos and that all three were at the same split. No cows, a few yappy dogs and a couple of barbed wire fences.

The Trail

Long Walk Trail According to Hugmanannygoat

As the briefing came to an end the rain started to fall again and the pack were sent on their way being led by Tinks and Sodomy only to find out that it was a false trail and so back to the start. Complaints to the Hare JT who responded that we had not been observant went he broke the sample check during his briefing. With the pack now on the main trail the rain had abated and it was on to the first check which was quickly broken by the front runners. However this could not be said for the second check which had the pack searching in three directions. The call was for straight on and then the pack started on an uphill trail to the three way split. At this point short walk went left, the long walk straight on and the runners/rambos to the right. Your scribe took the runners trail together with Sodomy, Mudman & Brambles.

Runners/Rambos Trail According to Tinks

The Runners trail headed upwards left and right to the crest where the trail came out on top of a rock outcrop with at which point the trail was not so obvious. A very nice view across to the south was to be seen as the rain had now stopped. Sodomy went right, no luck, Tinks went left and found trail which descended rather steeply downhill and eventually came out on a wide dirt track. The trail was fairly straight forward for a while and somewhere along this section the long walk must have joined as some of them, Foghorn, Half an Arse, No Name Alan and Sue, were passed by the runners. As can be seen from the GPS tracking above, the trail circumnavigated the hill giving a total distance for the runners of around 5.8 km and including 196 m of total climb. Most of the pack were back in around the hour and got stuck into snacks prepared by Tinks and washed down with cold bevies.

The tail enders included No Name Alan and Sue who blamed Davey Delayed for their late return. Apparently DD kept going off trail and they took pity on him and kept calling him back and hence delaying their return to the start.

Post Trail and Circle

The returning Religious Adviser Scotch Tape was working his powers as the post run celebration remained devoid of rain. Eventually Tinks called the pack together for the circle and handed out down downs to the following:

With the circle now closed there was some last supping while packing up the beer truck and then onto Sabai Sabai for further food and drink.

On On,
