Pre-Hash

With the misdirection's advising early arrivals would be able to take advantage of the limited parking at the Hash start and location of the beer truck, Tinks arrived early at 3.15 to an empty site. Next to arrive was Space Cowboy followed by Pinky and Ballbanger. Jock Twat arrived soon after and parked so that the beer was next to the GM. With the limited parking quickly filling late arrivals then started looking for suitable locations on the road to the Hash site. The really late arrivals, having to make a lengthy walk uphill as the final number of hashers reached 61.

Tinks called the gathered hounds to order for the pre-run briefing by Cathusalem. There were three trails, short and long walks and a runners trail. No cows or dogs to worry about, one fence crossing with the wire tied up for easier navigation. The first split was announced as being after 1.4 km followed by a second split and a final merge of all three prior to returning home. Prior to the off a call for the on after, at YAO's, indicted around 30 attending. With the briefing over the pack set off downhill to the first check

The Trails

The trails as set by the Hares

The pack started off at varying paces to the first check which took a short while to break and then it was into the trees and hilly ground for all. This caused the pack to get well spaced out over the next 1000 m of trail to the second check. Now this took some time to break with many options being checked out. Tinks himself completed 350+ meters looking for trail until finally a call was made and the trail found some 160m from the check. This helped to bring the pack together and not much further the run walk split and a smiling Hugs. The runners trail skirted pineapple fields with one false trail and excursion back into the bushes and trees which prevented any real pace being achieved until back out to skirt the same pineapple field at the opposite end and eventually meet Hare Hugs offering a short cut home on the short walk. It was also at this point the long walk and runners trail merged and then again circumnavigated more pineapple fields with a false trail thrown in. Tinks in company with Brambles found this false trail and rather than cut back to the original trail pushed on through in a direction most likely to meet the true trail. However this involved in very boggy and water logged ground with many rotting tree branches underfoot. But persevere they did to be rewarded with joining the true trail. As the walkers could be seen in the distance and the trail led in the opposite direction many it seemed opted to short cut in the direction of the distant walkers. Brambles and Onefer for sure took this option. Apparently when Tinks made it to the all trail merge the three trailing ladies, Peaches, Pom and Pussy Galore were enjoying their afternoon stroll and small talk and would eventually arrive back after a further 1.5 km just in time for the circle. The trail continued to follow the base of the hill and tree line and then followed an electric fence until eventually coming out onto the concrete road back to the start point. The trail taking from between 1 and 2 hours for all hounds to complete

Post Trail and Circle

As some hashers had been back best part of 30 minutes plus there were mumblings for the circle to start which Tinks was reluctant to do as he had only just arrived back having completed the full trail and taken no shortcuts. However after refreshing himself with a well earned beer the circle was called to order and the punishments/accolades given to the following:

Next Week's Hash: Spook announced that the trail would be out near Wat Huai Mongkol with full misdirection's being posted prior to next Saturday.

On After

Some thirty plus hashers made it to YAO restaurant, a regular haunt several years ago but with increased numbers at the on after had been avoided. However having been briefed they coped well and had plenty of cold beer. Unfortunately one couple, David & Sheila, received food very late and so into a take home bag it went.
