Pre-Hash

It was a return close to where Tinks set run #344 just off the new link road between 2444 and Soi 112 in an area being used by scramble bikes but luckily they were not on the scene when the pack started to gather. The weather had been favorable to the hares during the previous few days and with clear blue skies it looked set to being a warm run. The pack started gathering and paying their taxes to Tinks, the Tax Collector for this week. GM Hugs called the pack to order for the traditional pre-run briefing by Hares Spook and Rubber Duck.

The pack was advised of three trails, short walk, long walk and rambo's/runners. No particular hazards to be found on route, a little wet underfoot in places and some good views. Hare Spook also advised on some navigational skills, the setting sun in the west, The hills in the east opposite the setting sun, the lake in between and the power lines north south between the lake and the hills. He must have a premonition that some hashers would get lost today.

The Trail

The pack set off in an easterly direction and over the first obstacle an ant-rubbish dumping trench and then on towards the first check. Some of the pack went off trail before the reaching the check. The check proved a little difficult to break. It turned out to be a back check and therefore the front runners/walkers had a decision to make go back or track through the shiggy in the direction of the calling. However some chose to ignore the call and continued on with their own agenda despite strong calling from GM Hugs that they were heading in the wrong direction. Tinks, together with Butt Out , Screwdriver and a few others cut through the shiggy and came out on the main trail and shortly thereafter were joined by GM Hugs who did not follow his own preaching's to the pack. Shortly thereafter the short trail went left. Those choosing the longer trails continued on through the bush for another 1.1 km to the long walk/Rambo split.

The runners trail continued east towards the now closed municipality rubbish dump. The trail proved a little difficult to follow due to sparse amount of paper and an incorrectly broken check marked by confessed criminal Swindlers Pissed. It was at this point Tinks met up with Paracetamol and No Name Joy who just could not find trail. However we persevered and eventually found paper and continued until we met Cathusalem and Quick Micky who thought they were off trail as they had not seen paper for a while. Tinks, Paracetamol and Joy were more confident as we had accepted that paper was anything between 200 and 300 metres apart. Sure enough we were proved right. Along the trail there was a split and Tinks leading at the time continued left for best part of 250m before turning back having seen no paper and met up with the rest of the Rambo's. At this point paper was spotted and we were on the right trail so we pushed on and eventually met up with the long trail and head to the Pylons were Tinks had laid a check two weeks earlier. The trial meandered through the bush towards the setting sun and the top end of the lake. Paper was difficult to spot at times and this is probably were Brambles and Quick Micky got lost. The trial then skirted round the east side of the lake and back to the beer truck and snacks.

Post Trail and Circle

During the quenching of thirst and munching of snacks conversation revolved around the conservational approach taken by the Hares. However the trails proved to be popular with all but not sure about Brambles and Quick Micky. Brambles made it back during the circle but Quick Micky no showed

The Circle

GM Hugs called the circle to order even though two missing hashers were still unaccounted for and proceeded to award the following down downs:

Late arrivals: Old Macdonald and Body Snatcher who somehow could not find the run site although they did collect one sign on the Pala-u Road.

Hares: Spook and Rubber Duck who got thumbs up for good trails.

Last hasher home: Brambles Bill

Double Centurion: Brambles Bill

Entertainment interval: Pussy Galore challenged to consume a small pack of crackers in one minute or less without drinking water to assist.

Returnees: Stamp Licker, Rotten Dame, Body Snatcher, Paracetamol, Paddy Red Belly, David & Sheila Key, No Name Frank

Virgin Hasher: Ken Perkin

GM then closed the circle and then there was discussion about setting up a search party to find Micky. It transpired that he found his way to a close friend and ex-hasher Rolly's pad and reported in. No search party needed.

On After

Some 25 plus hashers then proceed to the Tum A Ao restaurant on Route 2004, the same place as the previous H2H3 run introduced by Tinks and they did an excellent job again this week. It looks like we have found a new venue for the area that can cater for a large crowd with good food at good prices and plenty of cold beer.

On On,
