Pre-Hash

The day dawned bright and sunny as is the norm around this time of year, in readiness for the Songkran run.

The site chosen by the Hares was very scenic, with a beautiful lake surrounded by hills in the background, which a few Hashers were quite sure was going to be part of the trail, I believe they were not disappointed. Once everyone had a chance to catch up the GM called the circle and the Hares gave the usual pre-trail preamble. This was listened to intently by the Hashers and then they were off.

Rainbow Balls, Slime and Lucky Me were late setting off, long after the pack had departed.

The RUN!

With the pack heading off to the right of the lake and the yellow flowering tree to find trail, Biermeister JT and Iceman Butt Out stayed behind injury to keep GM Legs Wide Open and Snacks Hoover company until return of the pack. The trail headed towards the hill through what was buy now very dry and dusty bush land to the gravel road. Hear the trail took a right and headed in the direction of the Black Mountain Road before taking a left along a a familiar path along the base of the hills. After having completed around 2.3 km Rainbow Balls was pleased to have caught up with the last known runner (Tinks) and sped off after the other runners. Shortly thereafter Screwdriver was spotted at a familiar junction on the trail to consider the physical condition of the hounds and to either encourage them on to complete the walkers trail or if looking fatigued show, them a short cut route to the left. However, Screwdriver felt that Rear Ender was fit enough to complete the whole of the Walker's trail but underestimated his ability to descend the rock slab. Shortly after this point the Walker/Rambo split sent the walkers left and the Rambo's right.

The Rambo trail passed through bamboo and was heavily carpeted in dead leaves and branches making it hard to move at a fast rate. Although Head Ballcock was heard to comment on Tinks ability to move over this terrain like a gazelle. Tinks responded it was more due to knowing the area and the general direction rather than agility. The Trail eventually came out at the top of what is known as the moonscape area and then headed back toward the setting sun along wide and dusty trails to the last check. At this point Tinks caught up with FRB and the other fit runners to find them wandering around like headless chickens. They had been looking in all directions but had failed to find trail other than to a false trail. After a while Tinks headed west down a dirt road which he had been assured was paperless with VD close behind feeling confident that it was not trail. However, Tinks continued keeping left and then found paper under a stone and the it was ON ON again. Tinks was very pleased to know have moved from being a rear-ender Rambo to a FRB for once, However this was too much for VD so he accelerated to take the lead followed by the other runners although not always on trail through the trees back to the carpark by the lake. Although this check was broken it would appear nobody laid paper in the correct direction, resulting in Lucky Me and Slime facing the same problems as the FRB's earlier.

Pre-Circle, Circle and Down Downs

The opinion of the hashers on their return, the walk and run were both excellent. Rainbow Balls made it back with the main group of Hashers but Slime and Lucky Me were back just as the circle was finishing, this did not stop them from getting a down down for being late starting and late coming back.

Congrats. to Bushwacker and Screwdriver for a very good trail, which everyone enjoyed.

The circle was called by the Grand Mattress Legs Wide Open, after everyone had enjoyed the superb snacks supplied by Hoover and the odd libation, very odd in some cases, had been imbibed by the assembled ~~nutter~~ Hashers.
