Pre-Run

I arrived at the run site around 4:10 followed shortly thereafter by Onefer and then the beer crew. The weather was rather hot with clear skies and next to no cloud. As it got closer to start time the pack size increased to 34. The Pre run circle was called at 4:55 and the pack were advised of three trails, a Short walk, a Long walk and a Rambo trail with a small speed bump. The pack were advised of some plagiarism of a previous H2H3 trail set four weeks earlier but that the old trail paper had been collected (this statement was used against me later). Also advised of several wire crossings but none electrified, a few dogs at the start, no barbed wire and no cattle. With the briefing over the pack set off to follow trail.

The Rambo Trail

The trail headed east down the road to the last junction right were the first paper was to be found. On through to open ground and left then right past the yappy dogs and then it was out into open country. The trail headed east to a wire fence then right and on to the first check. The pack were well spread out until trail was called and then all headed in the direction of Tinks and Orange ppin who were observing from a distance. Onefer it appeared had headed off on his own trail and was not seen by the Hares again. The trail then followed the old trail from four weeks before in the opposite direction. At the second check Slime found the trail and the pack then headed to the third check. Two false trails here but appeared not to cause the pack much trouble. On to the Short walk split and with the Rambo and long walk group turning left and the short walk group continuing on straight. At this point Colossus and Dave asked Tinks how far and were advised that they had completed almost half the trail distance. Based on this information they for the long walk. The pack was now split and at the fourth check the pack became divided resulting in the old trail from four weeks ago being found before the true trail was found. The group heading in the wrong direction eventually realised this error and after Screwdriver clarified the true course with Hare Tinks by phone headed back to the offending check and then they either headed home or set out on the intended trail. The trail then led to another check and then skirted pineapple fields before heading into a densely tree populated area before breaking out onto open ground. The trail then headed towards a small hill where a run/walk split was located. The Rambos went left and the walkers straight to both merge again at a further split option. The walkers going straight around the hill while the Rambos went over the hill. Then it was a three-way merge and all onto another check at the base of a small hill. The trail headed round the hill and then broke left into scrub land on to yet another Rambo walk split, merging again before following a fence line and then round a pineapple field and then on in home.

The Short Trail by Cathusalem

Cathusalem reported that he very much enjoyed the Short Walk. It was 4.2 km but took him 90 minutes because of the many trip hazards and twists and turns that made it interesting with only just enough paper. Good job by the Hares.

Pre-Circle:

The pack came in over a period of some 30 mins, whilst consuming crisps washed down with cold bevies, the chatter included comments about the trail and the hot weather. As the setting sun started to drop behind the hills to the west the GM called the post run circle to order.

Circle Down-Downs:

Hares: Tinks and Blue Flasher – Short walk voted Ok, same for the long walk and Rambo trails.

Late Arrivals: Matron and Flash in a Pan

Take Over: Cock in a Frock - Trying to take over the circle.

Teapotting: Flash in a Pan

The Lazy Hares: HTT accused the Hares of not telling the truth about collecting old trail paper and so avoided her DD as the pack endorsed her reasoning for not receiving aDD.

Teapotting: Blue Flasher

Christening: Renny Dobbs welcomed to the fold of the Hash House Harriers as Last Orders

Mountain Hasher: Brambles Bill having completed the whole course.

Teapotting: No Name John

Next Week's Hash: no information available

On After:

Some 20 plus hashers departed to Good Moon Restaurant for another buffet dinner scheduled for 7:30 pm
