Pre-Run

A visit to a favoured Brambles Bill location 7 km south of Sam Pan Nam Floating Market. The weather was looking good and assistant Hare Jock Twat was willing to venture out with the beer truck this week minus the beer due to current Covid restrictions. By the time the prerun circle was called some 24 hashers had gathered to listen to the Hares briefing of what was in store. A rambo trail with two splits options. Usual markings on the right with checks and maybe false trails and one ditch crossing towards the end of the trail.

The Trail

With the pre-run briefing over the pack set out on time and after only 350 m came to the first split with the Rambos going left and the walkers straight on. The Rambo trail circumnavigated a hill and then headed uphill to the walkers merhe point. From here the trail led onto a check which had many hounds confused. The walkers had headed down hill to the right and the FRB's were wandering around confused as the paper ran out down hill and it wasn't until mudman checked further to the left and past a Chinese burial mound that the trail was found. It transpired that co-ahre Jock Twat had misguided the hounds down hill in error. However several hounds continued on trail traversing round the east side of another hill with great panoramic views and the sight of Hare Brambles paralleling the trail lower down. It was around this part of the trail that Ding-a-Ling having been up and down the hill looking for trail at the last check decided to head west following the in trail and then leaving it to head further up the valley and join with the other hounds on the true trail. The trail skirted several pineapple fields and coming out on a dirt road. The trail then turned off to the right and through a rubber plantation and eventually to second split where Hare Brambles was on station to see us off in the right direction. Bent Banana going on the walkers trail as he was at the point of losing one of his shoe soles. The Rambo trail became a little confusing as it now headed away from the direction of home around some pineapple field and up to a main tarmac road. The trail followed the road in a southerly direction and at this point Xavier had arrived having lost trail somewhere. In his haste to make up for being so far behind he over ran the right turn of the road and through the tall grass. However he was called back and proceeded to then make his way in the right direction to merge point 2 where the trail then headed west and towards home. But the Hares then chose to swing the trail around to south away from home before then swing right and right again and again for the third time including a rope assisted ditch crossing to almost complete a circle. From here the trail went left and up to a gravel road which Ding-a-Ling had already ran on his out trip but this time not with paper on the right to complete the trail home.

Pre-Circle:

Upon return to the start, it was surprising to note that several of the usual FRB's were still not back as they had got completely lost because of the co-hare's mis-directions and tried to backtrack their way back onto the trail. Some hashers left early others went to their beverage boxes for something other than water or sodas.

Circle Down-Downs:

The only DDs went to The Hares in appreciation of their well laid and challenging for some trails.

On After:

Several hashers departed to the Good Moon restaurant where Tweedle Dee had promised something special.
