The Rawhide Hash--- Keep them Doggies Movin’

As it Subsequently transpired this was to be Tinks last trail before standing down as Trail Boss
He had spared no effort to ensure we upset all the local Farmers and Cow Hands with the Hash trail.
Even Rowdy Yates would have pulled his hair out with the havoc caused.

The Trail

Before setting off, he mischievously advised that we may get a toe wet as it had rained a couple of hours earlier.
However, he had set the first section through flooded Paddy Fields. It was as if he had never heard of the Rainy season. By the time runners and walkers had finished this section, we had turned the pristine mud retaining walls into a sea of mud and Hashers were up to their ankles in the muddy mess.

Undeterred the Runners who luckily had the drier wall crossings and feet, pressed on with yells of On On and Donga (he from the land of Oz) tooting his pesky horn, created enough noise to spook two herds of cattle, who as the runners passed proceeded to smash down the Coral Gates and escape at full pelt across the hash trails.

Cries of “don’t run” fell on deaf ears and runners continued running and cows followed suit. For a while chaos reigned. Toots and Cries continued to upset the cows and then runners appeared from other directions to cause more confusion amongst the herds. Wire fences disappeared as the cows went through them as if they did not exist. Barbed wire fared little better as they disappeared underfoot. Eventually the Cow herds and farmers on motor bikes, shaking their heads in dismay managed to regain some control, but at some cost and effort.

Gradually peace returned and the runners disappeared but being slower and in fear of the return of the cows we joined up with Ding a Ling to walk the remainder of the trail. As we approached the section near the Motorway, like all good trackers Ding a Ling held up a hand to alert us to danger and whispered Kemo Sabi -- Cows. Seconds later some 15 or so Cows and Bullocks came into view at a good gallop so we rapidly backed into the woods for shelter. The cattle passed by without so much as a glance; so we ventured forth only to see more cows in our path heading towards the woods we had just vacated.

We waited and then continued on our way and they on theirs. We pressed on and nearing the car park came across a stockade of cows standing in the middle staring at us with suspicion. I wonder why.

Finally, we came up to the carpark for a well earned beer.

Pre-Circle:

This was the 21st Anniversary of the Hua Hin Hash and the AGM. And after the Election Hash Food was served. Details of the new committee are on the H2H3 Web site

Historical Foot note.

In the early 60's, 'Rawhide' a Western series was hugely popular.

In UK it was screened at prime time on TV once week. There were many memorable Characters most notably being the roustabout Rowdy Yates played by Clint East Wood, and trail Boss Gil Favor Played by Eric Fleming. There were 217 episodes from 1959 to 1960.
