Location: 60s Town

GPS Coordinates: 12.579836, 99.861626

Hares: Donga and Honeymoon

Biermeister Team: Jock Twat & Honeymoon

Ice Man: Tinks Tax Collector: Tinks.

Number of Hashers: 30

Bemused hashers arrived to find Donga and Honeymoon had decided to mark the checks and false trails with psychedelic noughts and crosses in blue flour. Donga expounded false trail signage was not required with the X's, and they would be no more than 100-150 metres from the last obvious deviation, e.g. T-junction or intersection. The right way would be found within 75 metres from the deviation.

The mob took off and the front-runners found the first two markings had been nearly washed away.

Furthermore, Donga hadn't left any paper at the first check, so the hashers behind had to find their own way. Fortunately the hares had touched up the other 10 markings before the run. So there were no further issues other than Sodomy, who well ahead of the rest, somehow got into a small loop for 5 minutes. Who would have guessed?

But why deviate from tried and trusted H2H3 signage? Was Donga trying to distract the mob from the upcoming evening's AGM? All we know is he threatens to do it again on his next trail... but will use paper instead of flour.

Six hashers ran the full Rambo of 8kms, Sodomy did 9.8kms as he did most of the false trails plus his loopy loop. He was followed by Mudman, Flying Froggy, Bent Banana and much later by Slime and Lucky Me, who love doing the trails by themselves. What do they really get up to out there?

The other hashers all did the 5.7kms Walkers trail with the Runners overhauling them with 1.5kms to go. Well, except for Dave the Rave, Hugs and Smelly Fingers who were languishing well behind the rest of the Walkers. What's the hurry?

Bam and Nang looked like they'd found time to do some shopping with grins from ear to ear. And other than Slime and Lucky Me, the last in were Hot Pot and Honeymoon. They had been looking for edible bush plants on their way around, while Honeymoon ensured everyone got back in safely.

Walkers trail 5.7kms, additional Rambo loop was 2.3km, clockwise
