Pre-Hash and Trail

Another fantastic Hash Saturday, the pack of hounds from various parts of the world, and of various ages, modern to ancient history, gathered together, (circled up), suitably dressed in the usual silly hash t-shirts and long sexy flowery dresses.

Our Religious Advisor Rubber Duck was seen praying to the dark clouds above in order to stave off the rain. Having hared from this Car Park on a few previous occasions, I felt quite familiar with the area, so no need for my trusty Garmin to show me the route back home should I get lost... I thought. I should have known Tinks would conjure up a unique trail, so much so, I was unsure where I was in relation to the Car Park within 5 minutes of setting off, but no need to worry about getting lost, plenty of pre-rolled rain proofed shredded paper! More of that later...

Up ahead the FRB's were heading back to us. Was it a false trail I asked Mudman. No, we are just checking that Tink's check is not a back check. Doubting Tink's would include a back check without a pre-warning, myself and Cute Comer hopped over some barbed wire into bushy scrubland. "On On Honey!" cried an exited Cute Comer, Penny Lame teasing her with "we don't cry out on on honey on the hash!" ☺ We had got so far ahead of the pack we were first to come across the next check. Myself and Penny Lame went one way, Cute Comer the other where she once again found the paper. A more conservative cry of "On On" this time. From leading the pack I was now in my more usual position, towards the rear end where I remained for the rest of the trail. We did manage to get to the Car Park before the FRB's who were wasting their time flitting from one check to the other on a crazy check loop.

We marched through grassy woodland, ploughed fields interspersed with pleasant paths, pineapple fields, boggy and marshy in places, miry, mucky and wet. Not forgetting the hornets' nest and the barking dogs barring the way of the weary hashers on the last leg of the on-in. Half way round, the architect of this quagmire stood proud in the drizzling rain, offering shortcuts to those in need, and a fierce looking stick to send the others the long route home. What better way to spend your time on a late Saturday afternoon on the not too distant outskirts of Hua Hin?

Haring tip from Tinks... Save time laying the trail by having your shredded paper pre-molded. While sitting on your favorite chair watching TV or a movie, get your big bag of shredded paper by your side. Take a handful of the paper and mold it into a well-formed bun. By the end of the movie voila! A big bag of shredded paper buns! Endless fun for all the family! You can invite your friends around to join in too! No more fluffing about on the trail! Guaranteed rain proof and still as new ready for the Wednesday fun run!

On After

At the On After Swiss Euro Butcher, I had a delicious plate of sausage potato and onion, washed down with their prime German beer, (worth 180 baht a bottle IMO). The night was still young, (according to Puss in Boots), who managed to convince a few of us to visit the nearby Ssshhh! Bar for "one for the road" and then things became a little silly and most definitely fun! It was good Tinks and Golden Delicious managed to join us, having saved so much time making paper buns no doubt.

Notes on down downs: Did our GM Ding-a-Ling really recommend Bramble Bill's dress sense to Mel? Personally I'm all for this new look sexy dress theme! ☺ And what's with all these young attractive Farang ladies frequenting the hash? Looking around the circle it makes one wonder what the attraction is for them? But will they come again?
