Pre-Hash Circle.

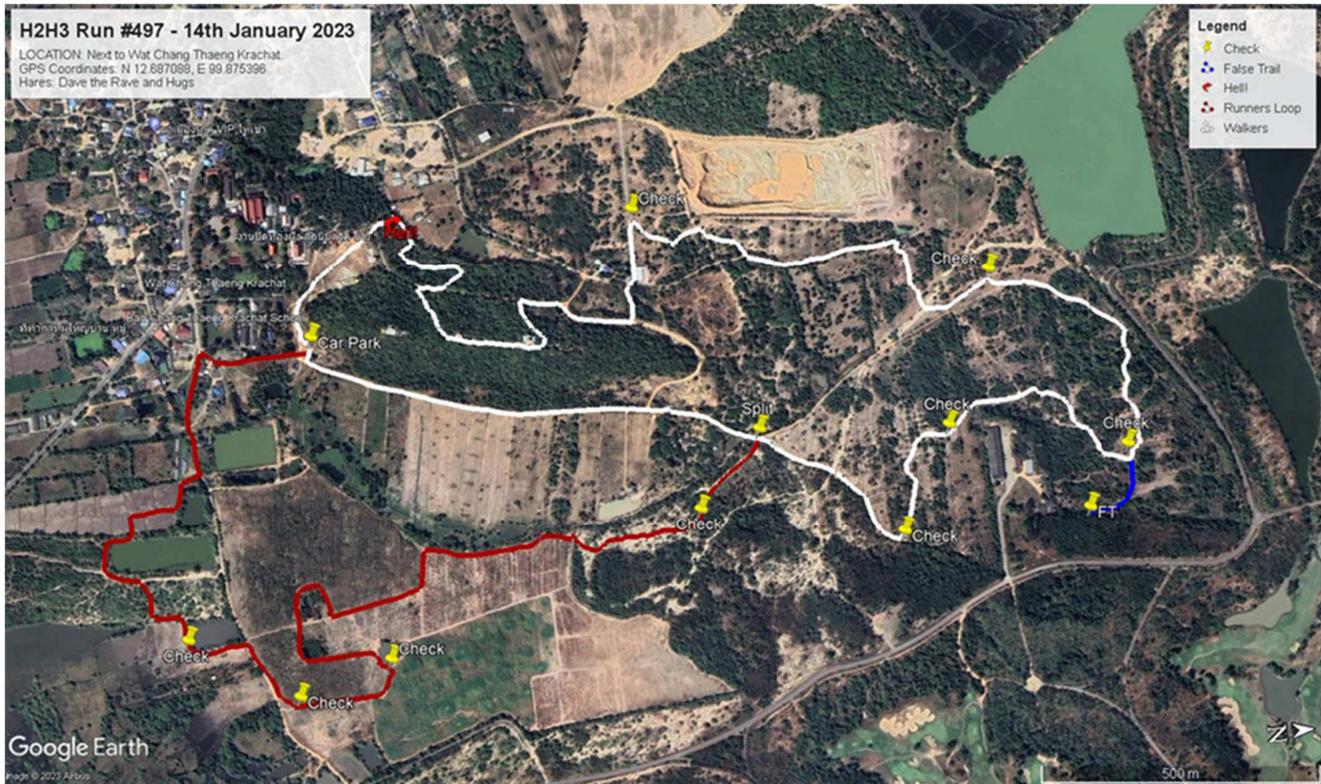

The pack started to gather from around 3:15 and setting themselves up in shaded area were possible. By around 3:50 the numbers had risen to around 30 and Hare Hugs set off in the direction of Hell with paper in hand. In the absence of GM Donga, and with VM's Pussy Peddler and Ding-a-Ling also absent, Dave the Rave called the pack together for the pre-run briefing. Two trails today a Walkers Trail with a split were the Rambo's will go left and later both will meet again before the end. No dogs to worry about and there may be some cattle so remember to walk and not run if you see them. Paper on the right and blue ties on trees. With the briefing over the On On was in the direction of HELL.

Trail.

The pack set off in the direction of the reclining Buddha and then on into the garden of Hell with many grotesque statues and having made it safely through hell the trail headed uphill and then took a left along the ridge and past the sitting Buddha's before descending to flat ground and on to the first check. By this time the FRB's were well ahead and I assume found trail without much difficulty. The trail wandered through scrubland to another check already broken by the FRB's. The trail passed through more bush land and onto another check. Plenty of paper could be seen so I headed left following paper on the ground and in tree forks until it stopped altogether. This turned out to be a false trail, the sign for which was taken by FRB himself and it subsequently transpired that Mudman advised him to take it with him. By now I was now well behind with Slime, Luckme and others having taken the correct trail and on through two more checks before reaching the Rambo Split where I met Hong Ting Tong and Max Factor. They enquired if I had seen either Head Ballcock or Knockout to which I responded no and didn't expect anyone to be behind me. A quick look at Google Maps showed it was a straight line back to the start for the Walkers so I decided to take the Rambo trail. The trail zig zagged around Rubber Plantations and other planted areas and with three more checks at which point the trail headed further away from home so I decided to short cut thereby bypassing the lake and subsequently met up with the trail again and followed paper back to the start. Last man home.

Post Hash Circle and Down Downs.

A pleasant evening with plenty of cold beverage and bags of crisps to enjoy with many small groups chatting about the trail and other events during the past week. With no Gm or VM's the pack started looking for someone to call the circle and so it was I ended up calling the pack to order and proceeded to award Down Downs for various reasons.
