The Perfect Hash

What is going on? The hares laid such a good trail there was nothing to complain about, no boos no thumbs down, all pats on the back and a jolly good time had by all.

Back to the beginning, hares in the circle ready to give us the pre run pep talk, fairly straight forward, they mentioned 2 dogs that barked at them at first but shouldn't give us any trouble, what can this mean, what have the hares done to those poor dogs? They warned us we might encounter a Black Cobra, OK, time to turn around and go home, I decided to stay close to Space Cowboy who had earlier showed me his weapon, magnificent! a Damascus Steel Dagger, not too big and not too small just right

The trail was so well marked we could have done it in the dark as demonstrated by Cathusalem who came in so late that Duchy was getting in a panic about her keys, apparently she had thrown them into Cathusalem's car earlier, did anybody else throw in their keys, maybe the hash is getting so easy we need another activity.

Note by Cathusalem: I'll ignore any comment about throwing in keys (!) but must say the Rambo trail was not easy but very enjoyable. The uphill trails are the best part of the Hua Hin hash, in my opinion, and Screwdriver and Butt Out excelled themselves with this one. Back to HYHMY...

Duchy was very vocal in telling us that every time she told someone her name they would then ask her 'where are you from' does she not know that we have an Aristocracy in the UK, maybe they thought she was from Cornwall!

Mingster was touting for business for her Waxing venture, Hugs and Latecomer would like to know if she does, and I quote "Willy and Bum Fluff" Waxing.

Anyway, back to the trail, there was one area that was a bit tricky, where the rain had washed away the ground and left quite deep channels that we had to climb over, lots of slippery shale.

I saw Latecomer coming back after failing to find the trail, yet again at a check, has he ever called the 'on on' at a check, I don't think so, he just manages to walk further than anyone else.

I have a question for Tinks, does he count T shirts when he goes to sleep at night?

CIRCLE NOTES (by Cathusalem)

I've relied on help from others to write these notes because, as mentioned above, I was late getting back and missed most of the circle proceedings.

Screwdriver and Butt Out got their due down-downs after getting the thumbs-up from all.

Visitors were asked to provide a brief resume of their hashing background to earn their down-downs. We welcomed Sticky Ending and Sticky Finger (from Philippines) with Crab, Lobster and Mr Hardy (from UK).

Virgins were next assembled for down-downs. Antje Bohm was understandably puzzled because she'd been twice before (but that was Cha-Am). The barmaids were kept busy providing down-down beer for Andy & Fiona Bevan, Becky Reynolds, Brian Pollard, Chris & Judy Blyth, Jenna Brown, Kourtney Lowndes and Ruud Siem

At some point in the proceedings, Tinks and Mudman were called in for their work on helping create and market the Goat T-shirt. Mudman got an extra glass for Mudgirl's design work. Two glasses were also handed to Tinks, for some reason, but there was no complaint from a man with his experience of double down-downs.

If Pussy Galore didn't get a down-down for her excellent snacks, she should have done...anyway

As I came running in late, I could hear the Returners song (being murdered) and you can see photographic evidence that Dutchie, Stitch-in-Time and Snail Trail were those that came forward. I think there might have been a few that didn't come forward but no names, no pack drill.

I was next for a down-down and think they sang "Why was he born so beautiful?" but I was only interested in the beer...certainly could have done with a double d-d.

Last up was next week's hare Old Macdonald....or was it somebody deputising for him.... didn't pay much attention...looking for a bottle of Chang.

On On,

ON AFTER

The On After was at the Isaan Restaurant on Pala-U Road, Isaan Baan Suan, attended by about 30 hashers. They looked after us well again and there was a very good atmosphere.
