The run site was easily found, well signed from the road, even the strong wind failed to destroy them. There was plenty of car parking space and an exclusive reserved space for the beer truck. Cathusalem blew his horn and the circle formed for the hares briefing, Cathusalem greeted the returners, then off the pack went. There were numerous checks and this enabled the walkers to keep catching up with the runners. The trail meandered through some beautiful countryside and was well marked with paper. At the first split the short walkers headed for home, at the second split the long walkers headed up a slight undulation and the runners went up and round a small hillock. After the merge everyone headed for home. The trail then lead down to the lake and a beautiful sunset.

The trail then became slightly more difficult because the paper used was yellow, not dayglow, so a little harder to follow. The last walker back was Jock Twat, obviously slowed down by his totally unfashionable new pants. The last man back was the returning VD, needs to get his fitness back. Hash snacks were excellent, compliments to Karn. Cathusalem called the circle as the dark descended on us. Ballbanger kindly set up a portable light and received a down down for his generosity. The Hares were complimented on an excellent trail, Hash snacks praised, returners welcomed back and all received down downs. Next Saturday's Cha Am Hash was announced and the circle was closed. The On After was at the Windmill restaurant, food and drinks were good but the service was a little slow. A good day was had by all.
