HASH NOTES: (1) Scaleyback and (2) Karaoke Queen

The RV was well signed, easy to find and the weather perfect for the hash. After a briefing by Cathusalem and Dutchy about sixty runners and walkers set off on the trail. Some clever false trails and a check-back kept the hash together to the run/walk split. Most managed to keep their feet dry by avoiding a couple of serious puddles left over from the floods. The short walkers on the return to the RV enjoyed good views of the hill and down town Hua Hin. The walk took about forty minutes.

From the split to the long walk/run junction it was a steady but gentle climb on a good track, the runners then went into the woods to meet up again with the long walkers nearing the top of the hill. Atop the hill, after skirting round the temple, there was a good track/road back down the hill. Farmer John got up so much speed on the steep road down that he had to divert into the trees to slow down! Most of the hashers were back in about one hour.

During the circle the GM and his Master of Vice, Pussy Pedaller, did the usual meet and greet and with congrats to Jock Twat on getting lost on his return from Bangkok in spite of instructions from Vera, the Satnav lady, and his wife. Thanks to Butt Out for being the iceman for the best part of two years. Our choir, in good voice as usual, was added to by an impromptu alt. choir by two visitors from Jordan.

Scalyback.

What I can remember of Saturday's Hash - by Karaoke Queen

Saturday's hash was well attended with a few virgins and a couple of visitors. The hash for me was a gentle walk with some beautiful views, The snacks provided by Dutchie were delicious, and Tinks in future will have to run a little bit faster so not to miss them. The circle had a festive feel with myself and Lost Cause in full Xmas regalia, even though the majority did not quite get in the Xmas mood.

At one point Tinks said to me "hope you are making notes" to which I replied "my mind is like a finely tuned computer" which of course is not the case after all. The on on was at shush bar where a few Xmas songs were sung, Lost Cause, Colossus and myself should have followed the majority and ordered food from Sabai Sabai as the little restaurant across the road took nearly 2 hours to get our order right, whilst we were all thinking shall we mug Jock Twat for a slice of his delicious looking pizza. But as always a great time had by all and looking forward to more of the same in the New Year.
